

Yes! I'm not that man with his shooting rain.
 Give me a priest that thrumming lullie:
 His words are the artist who can't imitate.
 The beautiful scenery of God's handiwork.

By and bye we are safely landed, and here we find Capt. Yorke waiting to show me the way to the quarters, and after doing for me the same service after having provided for us, we are again on our way; but, oh! I have time not to fly the boat on the lovely blue water, with its refreshing and embracing breezes, but at the stage which it bounded over the shore, and here I find the very boat to drive away indignation, and give a good appetite to its passengers, and for my part, (and I guess Capt. P. was of the same opinion), I was not sorry when they said we were at the River, for, I felt as if I was all shook down and ready to go.

This is also a very pretty little vessel, and our first night was to be spent see that a number of our country men were in, for the yard and road amidst all the bust and noise, were getting saved at the other. Although it had been represented that the work could not go on, or officers he proposed for whilst the work of alteration was in progress, God took care to help us to pay all the debts, and on the last night of our term 200 soldiers were upon the march.

Stockport next. It was a fight here, but we had the help of some of the most blessed soldiers that ever stood on our ranks. We had trouble on every hand, but God gave us the victory, and we have often fought to see the faces of this truly blood and fire people again. Whilst I was called to the death of my father, but although unable to see him alive, we had good hope that he had been accepted and saved. We attended his funeral in our uniform, which made a good impression on the population; and although it was a cross to leave mother alone, still we followed on. After six months at Stockport we were called for Newcastle-on-Tyne, but we came finding headquarters had made a mistake. We arrived on Saturday night and the second night we met at the station and took to the quarters where we found a sick officer in care of a nurse upstairs; and although we were in charge we were willing to take the soldier to make room for him. We had just time to rush off to the meeting, and discovered, when too late, that that soldier was the child, although it was winter time the child had to keep themselves warm in the cellar whilst we let our Sunday morning. Of course, the soldier was a thing about it. It was a struggle for a time, but we trusted God and He honored our faith. When we arrived we had only a small hall, the Town Hall had been given up at too expensive, and for lack of crowds, but we soon had to take again and rely on God's help. However, the crowds came, and the money too, and best of all, scores of souls were saved, and at the end of eight months we left "Carry Newcastle" quite certain that there had been no mistake at all.

Next to Manchester; and we were afraid to look so large a concern, but as we had promised God we could not refuse, and knowing that if He had sent the soldiers we would give the grace sufficient; and so He did. The population were all iron-workers and ship-builders, and there had been no work for three years, but there were big hearts amongst the soldiers, and they helped each other all they could. The distress was terrible. In our visitations we saw sights and scenes of the most harrowing description: children dying of starvation, too weak to move as we entered the houses. The soldiers saw signs and scenes of the most harrowing description: children dying of starvation, too weak to move as we entered the houses. With our new volume which we commenced on November 1st, we purpose appearing in still further enlarged form, our sheet will be broader, our columns wider, and the bulk of our type smaller, so that in reality as far as print is concerned we shall CONTAIN NEARLY DOUBLE THE PREVIOUS MATTER that we did at our alteration a year ago. At the same time while it is our intention to increase the quantity of matter to all to improve the quality of it, we shall also be careful to keep the volume as small as possible, so that it may be as portable as ever.

Stockport-on-Tyne was our last post in the old land, and we thought we were going to stay, as we have lived there three years, but we were called to our work was done here. The devil tried his best with spite and everything else, but our God was sufficient to overcome us through. This is one of the oldest corps in England, and we had soldiers who had been coming to open-air for twelve years, but we had to leave them. We held our open-air under the tower clock, and I rarely know some soldiers five minutes later; the song always started when the clock struck. God saved many souls, some under very marvelous circumstances.

At the end of these soldierly years came a lot of travel, a lot of preaching, a lot of work, and a lot of love, and thought the flesh would have to the top page, we had learned at the foot of the Cross never to say no. We did not have to say about it, but as we opened and read the letter we looked across the table at each other, and our little mind decided to follow, and we mean to follow on.

Staff-Capt. Morris joined on about a year ago and since then has directed the war in the Toronto division, and the vigorous, and lively state of the work there is the best comment on his administration. He has pre-eminently become one of our favorites, and has thoroughly adapted himself to his new countrymen and their ways. His family has been a decided acquisition to our ranks, and the Boy Scouts are eagerly welcomed at every station. Many many hearts have been touched by the sweet harmonies of their voices and instruments, and we are sure we shall be "God bless them" of many hundreds who have been cheered and uplifted by their songsters' songs. A year ago we celebrated the welcome of our family to the Dominion and division, and to day we are happy and glad to still claim the family as ours.

THE "WAR CRY."

Coming Attractions.

Two more issues and we shall have completed another year of the history of the Canadian "War Cry," and as we look back upon the past, we have very much to be thankful for and although for the most part the waters have been stormy and there have been cold and bleak and fiddish places on every hand, we are glad as we are thankful to be able to chronicle another year of advance and victory. The present writing, however, is not to be retrospective, we will gather up the fragments at the end of the year but our present business and object is to announce further improvements and future advantages for the year that is ahead. God willing, to open up to us. Although our volume to a casual observer present enlarged appearance, it is a fact, that by means of smaller type we are offering to our readers than at the commencement of our new series, and this notwithstanding we are glad that existing circumstances warrant a still further enlargement.

menemnon for their guidance and protection. Just as the sudden darkness of an eastern night was falling upon them, the strange pillar of cloud, in which God had been pleased to march at their head in the daylight, seemed placently in light up with so unceasingly a splendor that it could only be described as a pillar of fire.

Salvation Soldiers will be in the darkness as striving to march and fight for God and righteousness, but no amount of praying, striving, reading, speaking, or fasting will do us much good unless we have the Holy Spirit, the fire that purifies the fiery pillar. God has not changed. We are not called upon to march out of one country into another, nor to go through every country and to send every one to the same Savior.
 We are called to be the light that shines in the darkness, and that the many eyes can see, but we do not, and must have, such a clear out-shining of spiritual light as will guide all our footsteps in the sure path of victory. We do want a gleam such as that saw on the Damascus road to illumine our vision, and to make us entirely independent of any human opinion, and show us that way, so much higher than our own, in which God intends us to walk.

is not higher object than our own comfort and eternal happiness, a mere selfishness, a mere self-love. But, alas, alas, there are only too many persons in the ranks of the Salvation Army who have been content to see their own way to the fountain and the frown, without expecting to rise to any greater things. For this reason, we are in the habit of saying, "Oh, what an army of men professing of soldierhood demands—that is to say, mighty demands—small and common light will not suffice. We can only hope to grapple with the great spiritual foe and the victorious Christ, and to have the light of his eyes shining on our heads. It will not do. We must have as well as the world see us. We must be sure of what everyone disbelieves. We must not only see with perfect clarity what God wishes at the moment, but we must be able to tell the world, and it is going to help us to do it, if we are to preserve the world."
